Pricing and Fees: What Is Still Open

For Khadijah-tul-Zahra, at Peter's request. Prepared by the developer, 15 October 2026.

> Nothing in this area can be built yet. The money ledger proposal sent to Peter on 22 August is still unapproved, and its own first line says nothing in the money area is built until it is. Every price agreed this week sits behind that single approval.

1. Settled this week

CHARGE	PRICE	WHO PAYS
Event posting, first 1,000 Clients	$2.99	Client. Founder rate, first six months only.
Event posting, regular	$4.99	Client, once the introductory offer ends.
Agreement fee	$4.99	Both sides. Client and the Professional or Influencer, separately.
Repost an event	Same as a new posting	Client. A repost is a new posting, not a reopened one.

Membership stays what it is: the Professional and Influencer fee for exposure on the site, separate from any of the above.

2. Open questions, which is what Peter wants you on

#	QUESTION	WHY IT MATTERS
A	When is the posting fee taken?	Peter's B1 decision in August said at publish. The system charges it at finalisation today. One of the two has to move.
B	Does a posting expire on its own?	If yes, after how many days, and counted from publication or from the response deadline.
C	Can a multi-service request repost only its unfilled services for one fee?	And what happens to negotiations already under way on that posting.
D	Is a Direct Offer charged the posting fee?	It goes to one provider rather than the board, so it may not be a posting at all.
E	Can a Client withdraw a posting that has live bids?	And how much notice the bidders get.
F	What counts as the 1,000, and when does the six months start?	Registered Clients, or Clients who have posted. And whether the clock runs from signup or from first post.
G	Refunds	Stripe does not return its processing fee on a refund. So a refunded $2.99 costs the platform $0.39 rather than nothing.

3. Two things worth knowing before the answers are set

> Charging the professional is a new payment point, not a price change. The platform has never collected money from a Professional or Influencer inside the agreement flow. The $4.99 from their side needs that to be built, and it needs the professional agreement screens, which do not exist yet.

> The prices themselves are settings, not code. The amount and the moment it is collected both sit in configuration today, so moving from $2.99 to $4.99, or from finalisation to publish, is a change of setting rather than a rebuild. That is why the answers above matter more than the build.

4. Also requested by Peter

An Admin fee and revenue calculator, showing the gross charge, the actual Stripe fee, refunds and what GigResource keeps. Straightforward, and it belongs in the same piece of work as the ledger.

The one thing to move first. The money ledger approval. Until it is given, none of the prices above can be charged, and the answers to A through G have nowhere to live.
