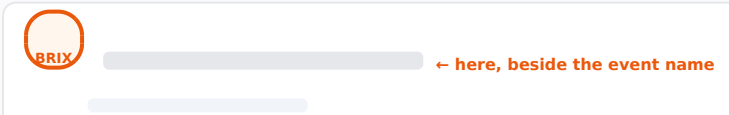
Where the Brix Artwork Goes

GigResource · 12 October 2026 · Prepared for Peter Zylstra

> In one line: the client picks the Event Type once, on Post an Event, and from that moment the matching Brix rides along with that event on every screen that shows the event, at small size, always beside the event name and never on top of a person, a price or a signature.

1. What it looks like on a screen

EVENT ROW, AS USED ON MY EVENTS, DASHBOARD, PROPOSALS, BOOKINGS AND CALENDAR



NOT here. Professional photo, price, deposit, balance, signature and payment buttons stay free of the mascot.

One size on list rows, about the size of a small avatar, a slightly larger one on an event's own page, and a bigger celebration pose on the confirmation screen. All of these use the centre headshot; the other five views are for later.

2. Screen by screen

PAGE	WHERE THE BRIX SITS	SIZE
Post an Event	Appears the moment the Event Type is chosen, next to the selection. This is its first appearance and where the choice gets stored.	Medium
Post an Event, side summary	Next to the Event Type line in the running summary, so it stays visible through all the steps.	Small
Confirmation screen	Centre of the success panel, celebration pose.	Large
Client Dashboard	On each upcoming event card, and beside event rows under the mini calendar.	Small
My Events	Beside the event name on every row.	Small
Event Details	Beside the event title in the header.	Medium
Proposals	Small marker on each proposal, to show which event it belongs to. Kept clear of the professional's photo.	Small
Bookings	Beside the event name on each booking.	Small
Calendar	In the event list and the day's detail panel. Not on every calendar square.	Small
Agreement pages	Event header only. Nothing near price, deposit, balance or signature.	Small
Messages	A small event marker on a conversation that belongs to an event. People's avatars stay the real people.	Small
Requests (Bidding, Emergency, Direct Offer)	Beside the request heading, once the event type is picked.	Small
Search and Browse	Only in the header strip, and only when the client arrived from a specific event. Never on a professional's photo.	Small
Reviews and completed events	Keeps the event hat, happy pose.	Small
Chatbot	The event Brix while the chat is about one event. The plain Guide Brix for general help.	Small
Empty states, errors, 404	The plain Guide Brix, never one of the event characters.	Medium

> Memorial / Celebration of Life: nothing at all. No event Brix, no Guide Brix, no Formal Event fallback.

3. What I need to place them

The reference sheets have the characters built into a layout, so they cannot be used on the site as they are. The artwork brief sets out the full specification; the short version is:

- Six views of each of the 39 characters, 234 images in all.
- PNG with a transparent background, no circle painted in. 512 by 512 for headshots, 512 by 768 for full body.
- Named as the brief sets out, for example BRIX-ID01-WEDDING-HEAD-C.
- The circle colour for each character as a hex code.
- The plain Guide Brix, and the celebration pose.

The site uses the centre headshot everywhere today. The other five views are worth having, but they are not what holds anything up.

4. Nothing is waiting on a decision

An earlier version of this page said fifteen characters had no event type behind them and were waiting on your call about the event list. That was counted against the wrong list and has been corrected: all 39 have an event behind them, and the designer can produce the whole set.

Page names above are the client screens as they exist on the site today.